PHASE 2 Skill development

During my thesis I learned how to broadens and upgrad my wet-lab and soft skillsets, as well as my personal qualities and achievements. More precisely, the first two years of thesis I learned how to master multiparametric flow cytometry analysis in order to map the immune cell populations in healthy murine prostate & murine prostate cancer. I also evolved my skills in data interpretation and presentation by being able to put together my results for public oral & poster communications in scientific conferences. Additionally, in the last 2 years I added in my toolbox the cutting-edge technique of single cell RNA sequencing annotation & interpretation after having the honor to be coached by an expert bioinfromatician of the Bioinformatic platfrom of our institute.

PHASE 1 Evaluation

Evaluation of my own data after analysis and interpretation according to litterature was an outstanding skill that i gained during the PhD years. I was able to judge my own results in respect to the corresponding litterature and the parameters used in my experimental protocols. For instance when the results were not validating my initial hypothesis, I was able out of experience to identify whether this is due to the experimental parameters used or due to a mistake or due to biological causes.
